

116TH CONGRESS
2D SESSION

H. RES. 845

Recognizing that international education and exchange programs further national security and foreign policy priorities, enhance economic competitiveness, and promote mutual understanding and cooperation among nations.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

FEBRUARY 11, 2020

Mr. BISHOP of Utah (for himself, Mr. HIMES, Mr. LOWENTHAL, Mr. PETERS, Mr. KEATING, Mr. MEEKS, Mr. DEFazio, Mr. PAPPAS, Mr. WELCH, Mr. SMITH of Washington, Mr. MCGOVERN, Mr. RODNEY DAVIS of Illinois, and Mr. GRIJALVA) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs

RESOLUTION

Recognizing that international education and exchange programs further national security and foreign policy priorities, enhance economic competitiveness, and promote mutual understanding and cooperation among nations.

Whereas hundreds of thousands of secondary and higher education students study overseas each year, coming from congressional districts across all 50 States and United States territories;

Whereas according to the Department of State, more than one million international students and other international education and exchange participants annually help create mutual understanding by living, studying, and working in local communities throughout the United States;

Whereas international education and exchange programs serve an effective and proven diplomatic function with countries key to foreign policy and national security priorities, encouraging goodwill toward the United States;

Whereas promoting the United States as a destination for international students and professionals, while also encouraging students and professionals to gain international experience abroad, are wise investments in our country's economic competitiveness;

Whereas it is imperative that students understand how to interact with their colleagues from around the world and operate in multicultural environments;

Whereas it is important to diversify the pool of citizens participating in international study and exchange experiences;

Whereas students and other young people are the world's future leaders and innovators;

Whereas there are multitudes of privately organized and funded exchange programs, while many others are funded by the Government;

Whereas international education and exchange programs exist at multiple levels—high school, college, graduate, educator, citizen, cultural, and sport programs;

Whereas international students consistently have a positive impact on the economy and job creation in every State and congressional district, according to economic analysis by NAFSA: Association of International Educators using international student enrollment data by the Institute of International Education in partnership with the Department of State and tuition data from the Department of Education;

Whereas this analysis shows that international students studying at United States colleges and universities contributed nearly $41 billion to the economy and supported 458,290 jobs during the 2018–2019 academic year;

Whereas their exchange experiences enable international visitors to become informal ambassadors both for their home countries while they are in the United States and for the United States when they return home, sharing an appreciation for common values, counteracting stereotypes, and enhancing respect for cultural differences;

Whereas research indicates that the United States needs to encourage more students to graduate with expertise in foreign languages, cultures, and politics to fill the demands of business, government, and universities;

Whereas international education and exchange programs are a singularly effective way for American students to develop foreign language capability and cultural awareness, skills that employers seek in order to remain globally competitive; and

Whereas international education and exchange programs shape the views and opinions of participants, many of whom are, or will become, leaders in their communities, both in the United States and abroad: Now, therefore, be it
