RESOLUTION

Recognizing the goal of United States foreign policy should be to promote human rights and equal rights for all.

Whereas the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, adopted by the United Nations (UN) 71 years ago on December 10, 1948, represented the first comprehensive agreement among nations as to the specific rights and freedoms of all human beings;

Whereas the Department of State has declared that a central goal of the United States foreign policy is the promotion of respect for human rights, as embodied in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights;

Whereas the Universal Declaration of Human Rights is a “common standard of achievement for all peoples and all nations, to the end that every individual and every organ of society, keeping this Declaration constantly in mind, shall strive by teaching and education to promote respect for these rights and freedoms and by progressive measures, national and international, to secure their universal and effective recognition and observance, both among the peoples of UN Member States themselves and among the peoples of territories under their jurisdiction.”;

Whereas it is in the national interest of the United States to impose consistent and principled human rights policies when engaging with both allies and competitors alike;

Whereas according to the Human Rights Foundation, more than half of the world’s population live under nondemocratic regimes, meaning that 3,700,000,000 people are controlled by absolute monarchs, military occupation or juntas, competitive authoritarians, or full-fledged dictatorships;

Whereas human rights, equal rights, and justice are essential to the realization of fundamental freedoms and promoting more equitable societies, preventing conflict and atrocities, and enhancing participation in the democratic process;

Whereas the United States must build respect for and the protection of human rights, equal rights, and justice for all here at home in order to set a standard by which both allies and competitors can be held to account; and

Whereas particularly in the face of rising global authoritarianism, the executive and legislative branches of the United States Government must prioritize protection of these rights in words and in action when they engage with foreign governments, allies, and competitors alike, around the globe: Now, therefore, be it

1       Resolved, That the House of Representatives—

2               (1) recognizes the 71st anniversary of the Uni-
3       versal Declaration of Human Rights and the celebra-
4       tion of “Human Rights Day”;

5               (2) supports the ideals, indivisibility, and uni-
6       versality of human rights, reaffirms the Universal
7       Declaration of Human Rights, and recognizes that
8       the erosion and violation of human rights anywhere
9       threaten fundamental human rights everywhere;

10              (3) urges every UN Member State to promote 11      universal human rights for all peoples;

12              (4) urges the executive and legislative branches
13      of the United States Government to develop and im-
14      plement United States foreign policy that promotes 15      human rights, equal rights, and justice for all; and

16              (5) encourages the people of the United States
17      to observe “Human Rights Day” and continue their 18      commitment to upholding freedom, democracy,
19      equality, and human rights across the globe.
